8 Summary of Research interests

My field of research is theoretical high-energy physics. In particular I am concerned with the the Standard Model (SM) and the Minimal Supersymmetric Standard Model (MSSM), radiative corrections therein, and corresponding experimental tests, in particular at the LHC.

Despite the impressive success of the SM, most physicists are convinced that it is only a low energy limit of a more predictive theory beyond. Supersymmetry (SUSY), and in particular the MSSM, is widely considered as the theoretically most appealing extension of the SM. The questions arise, how can one decide whether Supersymmetry is an extension of the SM that is realized in nature, and what can be learned about Supersymmetry already today from high- and low-energy collider experiments and from cosmological observations.

The discovery of a Higgs-like boson at the LHC in 2012 presents a unique opportunity to make substantial progress on these fundamental questions. My research in this context has been focused on studying the phenomenological consequences of the SM and its supersymmetric extension with the following main subjects:

- The discovery of a light Higgs(-like) boson as a probe of Supersymmetry and the SM
- Phenomenological predictions for current and future colliders (especially for the LHC and the LC) of the SM and its supersymmetric extensions, Synergy between the LHC and the LC
- Implications for the MSSM from cosmology and unified theories. Precision calculations for cosmological observables.
- Low-energy and electroweak precision observables as a test of the SM and the MSSM

As one of the leaders of the LHC Higgs Cross Section Working Group my work has a clear and direct impact on the interpretation of the new physics currently explored at the LHC. Apart from the overall coordination of the working group, in my contributions I provide precision predictions for the above subjects, thus permitting the direct comparison of experimental data with the various theoretical models. I performed detailed studies for the phenomenology of the SM and the MSSM at current/future colliders (LHC, ILC, γC , CLIC and μC). These studies combined (partially for the first time) results from low- and high-energy colliders and from cosmological observations.
